

2015 ladder research update

Matthew Gautreaux

After a year of field work at the Ladder here is what I have.

After 30 days of traversing the 122,000 acre property throughout trips in the spring summer and fall, 698 plant specimens have been collected. As of this date 200 have been identified to species. I am in the process of identifying, labeling, and prepping the dried specimens for the herbarium. It's been a productive year and I think more importantly a highly instructive year. I learned my way around the ranch and how to do this kind of research. Looking forward to next year which will be even more productive.
