

We have seen countless specials about adorable, charismatic, threatened and threatening animals, haven't we? Insects and fungi have had their dramatizations. Now PBS gives the vital and fascinating Plant Kingdom its due.

The Green Planet

Presented by Sir David Attenborough, The Green Planet takes viewers on a journey into the hidden world of plants, to experience it from their perspective and on their timescale. The result is a revelation – plants are as aggressive, competitive and dramatic as animals, locked in eternal strivings for food, for light, to reproduce and to scatter their young. Their solutions to the problems of living are often wondrous, beautiful and other-worldly.

Series began June 6 on KNME channel 5.1, repeating June 9 on channel 5.4 at 6 pm in Albuquerque and with continuing episodes. Check your local PBS listings for your opportunity to join the adventure.
